

The C.G. Jung Institute of Colorado
presents

Lost Innocence: Lost Soul The Impact of Early Trauma and its Healing Through Psychotherapy

a workshop with Donald Kalsched

Location: 1776 S. Jackson (Conference Room B)
Date & Time: Saturday, February 1, 2014; 9 a.m. – 2:30 p.m.

When trauma strikes the developing psyche of a child, a split sometimes occurs in which an innocent part of the personality retreats into the unconscious where it continues to live in suspended animation as a lost soul. This split leaves the functioning personality feeling "broken" and "unreal." St. Exupery's The Little Prince provides vivid imagery of this problem and its story also shows us how the split can be healed. Participants are asked to read The Little Prince before the workshop.

Donald Kalsched, Ph.D. is a Jungian Analyst and clinical psychologist who practices in Albuquerque, New Mexico. He is a member of the C. G. Jung Institute of Santa Fe and the Inter-Regional Society of Jungian Analysts and lectures internationally on the subject of trauma. His most recent book is Trauma and the Soul: A Psycho-spiritual Approach to Human Development and its Interruption. He and his wife live in Albuquerque during the winter, and summer in Newfoundland, Canada.

The C.G. Jung Institute of Colorado is a non-profit organization recognized by the International Association for Analytical Psychology (IAAP), the official accrediting body for Jungian analysts founded by Jung and headquartered in Zurich, Switzerland. The Institute also offers Jungian training leading to a diploma in analytical psychology. For further information regarding this workshop, call 303-831-9209.
